LAND OFFICE RETURNS.
Nothing reveals the progress of the Edmonton district in a better or more concise form than the homesteaded entries, etc., at the Edmonton Land Office for the month of June as shown in the following table:

Homesteaded entries	156	318	414

SETTLERS AND CROPS

The past four months in the Edmonton district is a continued story of unprecedented progress. Never before in the history of the district has it received such a steady flow of immigration. A pleasing feature of this is that the settlers are a very superior class, being in most cases, fairly well-to-do. A large number of English and Scotch farmers, who are equally as well endowed with brains as with money, have settled in our midst and many more will follow on their report of the country. It is not so important that the Edmonton district receives a large number of old country settlers as that those which it does receive are of the right calibre. If these settlers understand or are willing to study the conditions as they exist here there is no doubt of their ultimate success, and if successful, immigration from their particular districts in the old country will receive a decided impetus, greatly to our benefit. Besides old country settlers, numerous settlers from Ontario, Quebec, and the Maritime provinces have been attracted to our district. A very large percentage of these have settled along the Vermilion. Perhaps the largest portion of the arrivals of the past four months have been from the western States. Although we like to see people of our empire, and particularly those who have been brought up under kindred institutions to ourselves, settle in our midst, yet there is a prevalent disposition to rejoice at the coming of the American farmers. They bring to us years of experience under similar climatic and agricultural conditions as we enjoy here. In the majority of cases they bring capital and also the spirit of enterprise, which does not hesitate in investing that capital. In other words the average American farmer will not delay investing a few dollars until he sees a sufficient reimbursement at his fingers' end. Such a spirit is absolutely necessary in the development of a new country. Settlers of a thrifty, industrious nature are constantly arriving from Germany. With such settlers as we have enumerated the splendid future of our district is assured.

Turning from the class of settlers that are seeking this district to the weather and the condition of our crops, we find at once the reason for the immigration. The district is eminently suitable for mixed farming and the climatic conditions are uniformly favorable. Abundant showers of rain have fallen and the crops have been fairly bounding along. The country on every side is a scene of verdant beauty and nothing less than an improbable accident will keep the district from enjoying the most successful year in its history. The crops give every assurance of producing a record breaking yield and this will put the district and the whole country on a substantial basis from which it will never recede.

FROM OTTAWA

July 1st, 1903.
Bulletin Correspondence.

The much vexed question of the land grant to the Red Deer Valley railway and coal company was settled yesterday, when the bill came before the railway committee, the minister of railways announced that the government had reached a conclusion not to revive the land grant of 350,000 acres which had been attached to this charter for about fourteen years. The last order-in-council continuing the land grant expired on that day, and with the announcement that there would be no revival, the bill was placed on the same footing as any other railway application. An extension of time was asked for and the bill was set over for consideration on Friday to enable the redrafting of some of its provisions. This ends a struggle which commenced in the railway committee last year to apply the principle of no land grants to railways to this particular charter. It has been the avowed policy of the present government not to grant any land to railway companies, and no grants have been made by them; but in some instances land grants made by their predecessors have been continued by them. This has been held to be a deviation from their avowed policy. As a matter of fact, the Red Deer Valley land grant had been continued since by this government, and had it been continued again it would certainly have been taken as a violation of a principle of not giving land grants, and would have left the government and its supporters open to very severe attack.

Last night Lieut.-Col. Thompson, M. P. for Haldimand, made a carefully prepared speech on the condition of the Canadian militia. He drew a rather melancholy picture of the disintegration of the country battalions caused, as he alleged, by the existence of good times, which made the pay offered the volunteer for his time occupied in camp seem smaller than it had formerly been. He strongly advocated that the pay of the volunteer private be raised from fifty cents a day to one dollar per day, arguing that men could not be expected to give their attention, and lose their time and money as well, in militia service. According to a calculation which he submitted, it would cost the country about a quarter of a million dollars yearly to increase the pay to the amount he mentioned. He further argued that the necessity of increasing the pay to the city battalions was not as great as in the case of the country battalions. If the increased pay were given only to the country battalions, it would mean less than one hundred and fifty thousand dollars per year. The total present militia expenditure is about one and three-quarter millions of dollars yearly. This expenditure is rendered to a great degree useless by the small number of men turning out to drill, and if it can be made of value by an increase in the amount of a quarter of a million, the increase would be true economy. The leader of the opposition and several of his followers endorsed the idea of increased pay for the volunteers. In the absence of the minister of militia, the minister of finance assured the House that the government would consider favorably the idea of increasing the pay of the volunteers. Messrs. Bourassa on the Liberal side, and Morin on the Conservative side, declared against any increase in the cost of the militia.

The negotiations between the government and the Grand Trunk Pacific are still in progress, but rumors are current that they are now nearly concluded. While any announcement would be premature, the rumor is that the Grand Trunk will be aided by a guarantee of bonds to build from Winnipeg to the Pacific coast, a certain guarantee being given on the prairie section, and the guarantee of a higher amount on the mountain section; that the government will build a line from Quebec to Winnipeg, over which the Grand Trunk and any other railway company, desiring it may have running rights. This idea seems to find very considerable favor, both in the East and in the West, although it is not altogether satisfactory to the Canadian Northern or the Grand Trunk Pacific, both of which companies wanted to be "it." When the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme was first spoken of it was taken for granted that its success meant the absorption of the Canadian Northern system now in competition with the Canadian Pacific. This idea was based on the belief, absolutely well-founded, that there was neither room, occasion, nor finances to give aid to more than railway system through Canada from the Atlantic seaboard to Winnipeg. The distance is so great and the character of the country so unknown, or so unfavorably known, that two additional railway lines at the present time are not practicable and will not be necessary for a very long period. Whether the Canadian Northern or the Grand Trunk built the line from Winnipeg to Quebec, the country would have to pay for it. Both companies started out with this idea, which was universally accepted. The government's building and owning the line will not cost the country any more than the aiding of one line and both the Grand Trunk and Canadian Northern railway systems of the west will have an eastern outlet, while at the same time the international, if necessary, may be operated over the same line to Winnipeg. The country will have all the advantages of three railway systems between Winnipeg and the Atlantic at the cost of one railway. With the question of eastern outlet settled, there is ample room in the west for both the Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk, and even for other independent competing companies, as the growth and necessities of the country demand. By the adoption of the suggested policy railway monopoly in the Northwest is effectively broken, eastern and western Canada are linked together by competitive railway systems and the whole is secured at a minimum cost. Last year the Canadian Northern company was promised assistance to enable it to reach Edmonton. That is to say to develop the Saskatchewan Valley from end to end. There is no question that their idea was that if they once occupied the Saskatchewan Valley, they would be assured of ultimately controlling a transcontinental system and it was this assurance and idea that kept them from acceding to the Grand Trunk Pacific's desire to acquire their line. The government is carrying out its pledge to the Canadian Northern to the letter, but that is not preventing the introduction into the Northwest of one of the most powerful railway combinations on the continent nor preventing that corporation from becoming a competitor with the C. P. R. for transcontinental trade; a trade which owing to its immense system of connections in Eastern Canada, it is enabled to carry on to the advantage of the country to a degree that could never be attained by the Canadian Northern owing to its lack of eastern connections, or even by the Canadian Pacific, which, although it looms so large in the West, takes second place in the East to the Grand Trunk.

His Last Hope Realized

(From the Sentinel, Gebo, Mont.)

In the first opening of Oklahoma to settlers in 1889, the editor of this paper was among the many seekers after fortune who made the big race, one fine day in April. During his traveling about and afterwards his camping upon his claim he encountered much bad water, which, together with the severe heat gave him a very severe diarrhoea which it seemed almost impossible to check, and along in June the case became so bad he expected to die.

One day one of his neighbors brought him one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy as a last hope. A big dose was given him while he was rolling about on the ground in great agony, and in a few minutes the dose was repeated. The good effect of the medicine was soon noticed, and within an hour the patient was taking his first sound sleep for a fortnight. That one little bottle worked a complete cure, and he cannot help but feel grateful. The season for bowel disorders being at hand suggests this item. For sale by all druggists.
